

- Home
- About SW
- Get Involved!
- Contact

Subscribe by RSS or Email

SAMPSONIA WAY

An Online Magazine on Literature, Free Speech and Social Justice

- Features
- Literary Voices
- Interviews
- Fearless, Ink.
- SW Daily
- Multimedia
- About SW

Donate!

You are here: Home / Literary Voices / Exodus

Exodus

by Sarah Williams-Devereux / December 17, 2010 / No comments

Tweet

We have already gone
to the hot side of the sun,

the places where fire
lights on the water, where dark blood pours through the long night.

We have already been to that far away place.

We know
what waits for us there,
to scrape our heart
with small, sharp teeth.

We will scatter
with all voice and no sound.

Sarah Williams-Devereux is a member of the Madwomen in the Attic workshop. Read more about Williams-Devereux and the workshop here.

Tags:

About the Author

